son next fall a hog show. His idea was to hold the hog show in connection with the proposed county nection with the proposed county fair. In the event a county fair is not held, he suggested the holding of a hog show alone. Mr. Spearman's idea is to offer a capital prize of $100 for the one exhibiting the finest pair of Berkshire hogs and a series of smaller prizes for those winning other than the first honor.

Local parties, it was stated, have already guaranteed the $100 for the capital prize, and it is proposed to use the $37.50 fund which Mr. Spearman has made up for the other prizes, The capital prize has been guaranteed in order that those desiring to enter the contest may select their stock now and prepare for the con-

It was stated that there has been wonderful increase in the number of blooded hogs that are being raised in Anderson county now. Mr. Spear-man himself has sold blooded stock to some 30 or 40 farmers in his section of the county who are now reg-ular producers of the hogs. It was also stated that the hog farm of B. M. Auli at Pendleton is responsible for a large number of farmers of that section raising blooded stock.

Williford School Latest to Place Order for Forty Dollar Out-

Of the 86 rural schools in Anderson county not more than a half dozen are without excellent libraries, according to statistics furnished The Intelligen-cer by Miss Maggie M. Garlington county supervisor of rural chools. The last institution to avail itself of the advantages of a library is the Willi-ford school, which has just placed an order for an outlay of books costing $30 and a bookcase costing $10, the entire outfit being selected by Miss Garlington at the request of the ofcials of the school.

At the same time that Miss Garling ton placed the order for the new li-bary for the Williford school she or-dered $15 worth of new books for the High Point school and an equa amount of new books for the Barker's Creek school. These books are ex-pected to arrive here within the next

As generally known, there is an ex-cellent plan whereby rural schools can acquire small libraries. If the patrons of any school will raise $10 for ibrary purposes the trustees will donate $10, the county board of educa-tion a like amount and the State board of education $10. With the $50 thus raised three fourths of the amount, or $30, is invested in books and the

When a school already possessing a library wishes to add to the number of books on hand a similar plan is followed. If the patrons of the school will subscribe $5 for this purpose the trustees will donate a similar sum and the State board of education $5. ARRANGING FOR BOYS'

EXCELLENT SHOW EXPECT-ED TO BE STAGED ON DE-CEMBER 12

VALUABLE PRIZES

Offered Boys Winning Honors in the Several Classes-Expert Judges.

J. W. Rothrock, in charge of the farmers' cooperative demonstration work for Anderson county, for the past week has been calling upon the mombers of the boys' corn club and assisting them in preparing their reports for the annual meeting of the club to be held at the chamber of commerce December 12.

W. W. Long, agent in charge of the farmers' cooperative demonstration work in South Carolina, has promised Mr. Rothrock two expert judges to pass upon the cor. to be submitted at the contest next Saturday week. Mr. Long has stated that he will probably attend the meeting of the boys' corn club in person.

Mr. Long has stated that he will probably attend the meeting of the boys' corn club in person.

While membership of the corn club has fallen off considerably since the senson started, the success of the enterprise will by no means be impaired. It is expected that the exhibits of corn at the chamber of commerce on December 12 will be as fine as though the membership of the club had held out to its full strength. The club work started out at the first of the season with a membership of something like 50. Just how many of these have fallen out, is not definitely known, but it is estimated that something like 50 per cont have forsaken the work.

An attractive prize list has been completed by Mr. Rothrock and all of the prizes are well worth trying for. One of the most attractive prizes is that offered by President Riggs of Clemson College. To the two boys making the largest and cheapest yield of corn per acre he will offer a four weeks' course at Clemson College next August, when the subjects of agriculture, dairying horticulture, etc., will be taught them by the hest experts.

Relief Legislation For Cotton States

For Cotton States
WASHINGTON, Dec. 1—To determine upon a plan of procedure for financial relief legislation for the cotton states, Senator Shepherd, of Texas today announced that a joint conference of Southern senators and representatives would be held immediately after Congress convenes next week.

Several measures are pending in both houses, but it is the purpose of leaders in the cotton relief movement to press bills which may seem most advantageous under conditions now existing in the cotton states.
